By Lucas Bridges, Thomas Bridges, and John Cooper

This groundbreaking work is a comprehensive exploration of the natural history, prehistory, and ethnography of the southernmost tip of South America, including the islands of Tierra del Fuego and the adjacent mainland regions of Patagonia and the southern Andes.

The book is divided into three parts. The first part, by Lucas Bridges, provides a detailed natural history of the region, covering its geology, climate, flora, and fauna. The second part, by Thomas Bridges, offers a fascinating account of the prehistory of the region, based on his extensive archaeological research. The third part, by John Cooper, presents a comprehensive ethnography of the indigenous peoples of the region, including the Fuegians, Yamana, Selk'nam, Alacaluf, Haush, and Onas.

This book is a must-read for anyone interested in the natural history, prehistory, or ethnography of South America. It is a valuable resource for scholars, students, and anyone else who wants to learn more about this fascinating region.
