One of my favorite ways to explore New Zealand is by bike. It's a great way to get up close and personal with the scenery, and to experience the country at a slower pace. I've cycled through some of the most beautiful parts of New Zealand, and I've always been amazed by the diversity of the landscape.

One of the most iconic images of New Zealand is the rainbow crossing in Rotorua. This colorful pedestrian crossing is a popular tourist destination, and it's a great place to capture a unique photo. I've cycled across the rainbow crossing several times, and I always love the way the colors look in the sunlight.

In addition to the rainbow crossing, there are many other great places to cycle in New Zealand. The country has a well-developed network of bike paths and trails, so it's easy to find a route that suits your fitness level and interests.

If you're looking for a truly unique and unforgettable travel experience, I highly recommend cycling through New Zealand. It's a great way to see the country's stunning scenery, and to experience the Kiwi way of life.

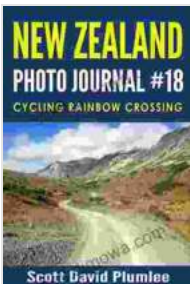

Here are some of my favorite photos from my cycling journey through New Zealand:

I hope you enjoy these photos, and that they inspire you to explore the beauty of New Zealand for yourself.
